PROGRESS IN SCIENCE

Americans may soon be able to keep cooler in warm weather while using up less energy than ever before, thanks to a team of engineers at the University of Pennsylvania that's started work on harnessing the sun's energy to cool us off.

Professors Noam Lior (left) and Hsuan Yeh of the University's College of Engineering and Applied Sciences head the team, which intends to develop a solar-powered air conditioner.

They predict that their air conditioner will help to alleviate the nation's energy problems by operating much more efficiently and economically than current models. They plan to design, build, test and analyze a solar-powered vapor compression cycle water chiller (the cooling unit of an air conditioner) of 11- to 25-ton capacity.

Yeh expects mass production to reduce operational costs, provide a good payback period and save energy in the national sense.

The ancient Europeans believed beating the water would cause rain.

May Destroy Rescue Squads

later, they sent a man here from Richmond to give the test. I made a 72, passing by only 2 points. I could not understand the questions. We now have 7 EMT members." Staples stated that if an EMT course were given at Community College in Lynchburg he would not consider taking it. "If they come down here to teach EMT and make it convenient, I probably will take it." Staples added.

His feelings in the matter seemed to be that Advanced First Aid & Emergency Care training should be required and EMT training should be a course you would just WANT to take, not be required to take.

Ms. McHenry said that she thinks EMT will be mandated, this will not change.

For this one reason alone, many rescue squads will sooner or later cease to operate.

Otho Martin, Jr., member of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors, asked Ms. McHenry if EMT is mandated and all volunteers drop out, what does she plan to do. "Does the State Health Department plan to offer this service to Appomattox County?" he asked.

Her reply was "we are not prepared at this time, financially or otherwise, to furnish these services to any county."

James C. Rogers, Captain of Appomattox squad, said, "we plan to continue to operate as we are now until the state comes and closes us down. We do not plan to leave the county without assistance if we can help it."

Members of the volunteer rescue squads should be writing their own rules and regulations, not the state.

If the state is allowed to "take over" volunteers of rescue squads or any other volunteer organizaitons and tell them what to do, how to do it and when to do it, what will they take over next.

It may very well help and surely can do no harm if interested persons write Howard Anderson, our State Senator, and Claude W. Anderson, our representative to the House of Delegates, and tell them your feelings in this matter. You are asked to also write the Bureau of Emergency Medical Services, State Health Department, 1102 James Madison Building, 109 Governor Street, Richmond, VA 23219.

It may be a good idea for the General Assembly to do a reverse and take this power away from the State Health Department's Bureau of EMS and let the volunteers operate the volunteer organizations by their own rules and regulations.

(For the past several years I have considered it a privilege to serve as an active member of the Appomattox County Rescue Squad. I served as secretary of our local squad for approximately three years and now serve as 2nd Lieutenant, Senior and as secretary of the Fifth District, VAVRS. My crew was on call last week from midnight Sunday, March 12th, until midnight Sunday, March 16th, Four of the seven nights we were out on calls for two to three hours during the middle of the night, we had two calls Saturday and four calls on Sunday. I worked a regular 40-hour week at the Times-Virginian and also attended four night meetings, two of which were rescue squad meetings. I am not bragging, I am not complaining. Many of our volunteer members make two or three calls for each one I go on. I want to have as much training as I can get, but somehow time runs out before we can do all we would like to do. I possibly at this time do not think I can give 120 hours for additional training. Beck Hudson, News Editor, Times-Virginian.)

"The South 40" by JAMES A. SMITH EXTENSION AGENT

Last week we examined the first termites of the year. Termites swarm in March and April. The production of winged termites from a colony indicates that the colony has been present for one to two years. When these insects swarm, like a bee, they are going elsewhere to set up business.

If you have trouble identifying whether the insect is a flying ant or flying termite, we'll be glad to assist you. Just bring a few by in a small jar.

If it is termites, don't get excited - nothing has to be done today or tomorrow, but plans should be made. Get at least two bids from a pest control operator. Those that are members of the Virginia State Pest Control Association and/or National Pest Control are usually better trained and should give you a better job.

To separate an ant from a termite: the winged termites have two pair of equal-length, long wings and a stout body. Winged ants have unequal-length wings with a body that's pinched at the waist.

There are 80 thousand colonies of bees in Virginia that generate $1,033,000 in annual sales.

Everyone that uses pesticides has a responsibility to help protect the bee population.

The ASCS Office has an indemnity program for beekeepers that loose bees. For the past several years about $3 million annually has been spent.

Advise beekeepers if you are apply insecticides to or near honey producing plants.

Beginning March 23, swine over 23 months old shipped out of Virginia for slaughter will have to have identifying tatoos or tags.

Breeder stock over six months old unless from a certified brucellosis-free herd or area must have a negative brucellosis test within 30 days of shipment across state lines.

This year there are a number of compact or bush cucurbits being offered.

VPI recommends Bush Whop per cucumber, Short'n Sweet cantaloupe and Sugar Bush watermelon.

There are some who say "Pot Luck" may be better than the Bush Whopper cucumber. Kingswood Garden, Mansfield, Ohio, has this to say about several of the compacts. Big-open cataloupe has the same super flavor as the original Israeli strain. Short'n Sweet cantaloupe does not have the good flavor of larger melons. Space master cucumber has large fruits of high quality. Oliver's Pearl cluster, a honeydew melon, takes 110 days to mature, is two feet across, and the fruits are four to five inches in diameter.

On the recommended vegetable varieties this year (copies available from this office) are several new vegetables: Beacon asparagus, Guardion cabbage, Gold King carrots, Self-Blanche cauliflower, Sundance and Candyman sweet corn, Bush Whopper, Sweet Slice and Liberty cucumber, Cosmo lettuce, Star Trek and Short'n Sweet cantaloupe, Mustang Onion, Howden and Spirit pumpkin, Melody spinach, Gold Neck, Table Ace and Butterbush squash, Red Pac and Sunrise tomatoes and Sugar Bush and Sweet Favorite watermelon.

Zinnia 'Red Sun' Hybrid
All-America Selections Bronze Medal 1978

Commanding color and gigantic blossoms focus attention on 'Red Sun', regardless of where you plant this zinnia in your garden. Yet, the deep scarlet red color is not harsh and the blossoms are so neatly formed that 'Red Sun' fits comfortably into any landscape.

Such huge blossoms—4 to 5 inches across—can place stresses on zinnia plants, especially during rainy or windy weather. Accordingly, the breeders of 'Red Sun' reduced the overall plant height to 18 to 24 inches while retaining heavy, strong stems and branches.

Blossoms of 'Red Sun' develop slowly and stay in peak condition for days and days. As the new center petals unfold they show the contrasting yellow color of their reverse sides. Individual mature blossoms are a study in themselves, with gradations of red deepening toward the outer petals.

'Red Sun' blooms early for such a large-flowered zinnia and due to its hybrid vigor, the average size of blossoms holds up throughout the extended season of bloom.

U.D.C. Met March 16th

The Appomattox Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy met at John Mosby Inn Restaurant on March 16, for a luncheon meeting. Fifteen members and one visitor were present.

The meeting was called to order by the president who led in the pledge and salutes to the flags and the ritual. Mrs. O. W. Martin, Jr. led in prayer.

An interesting program on Secesh Women was presented by Mrs. Lucille Ferrell, historian. We were told that women played a very important role during the war years and the list of their services is endless.

A donation of $10 was made to the Appomattox Co- Olympics Program.

It was noted by the chairman to make Mrs. Jane Plunkett honorary member and to put a book in the county library in memory of Mrs. Bessie Smith.

Members were reminded of the Third District spring conference which will be held at Dundas, Virginia on April 15.

It was announced that there will be a tactical demonstration at Sayler's Creek Battlefield Park on April 2 to which the public is invited.

The meeting adjourned with the decision to meet at Maude's Restaurant for the April meeting.
